- Explores the wondrous places and themes that were Vincent van Gogh's, viewing them afresh through the lens of Karin Borghouts

Vincent van Gogh (1853-1890) moved from place to place from quite early on in his life, never staying in one spot for very long. In the Borinage district of Belgium, he decided to devote himself to art. The photographer Karin Borghouts followed in Vincent's footsteps, from his Dutch birthplace in Zundert to Auvers-sur-Oise in France where he took his own life. She has also reconstructed 25 of his still lifes and photographed them.

Text in English, French and Dutch.
