- Each project is illustrated with gorgeous photography and accompanied by a narrative about the client, their brief, and Sutton's approach to the design.

Interior designer Patrick Sutton is renowned for his close collaborations with clients to produce meaningful homes for their lifestyle, life stage, and style preferences. In this book, his follow-up to Storied Interiors (2018), Sutton presents seven beautiful and unique residences, telling the stories of how listening to his clients inherently shaped the design.

The seven projects are located in Delaware, Maryland, Washington, D.C., and Wyoming, and include stately manors as well as an oceanfront mansion, luxurious guesthouse, and Western holiday home. While Sutton's objectives for every project might be similar—discovering the "story" to help him craft a design that is influenced by the location, history, and client's aspirations—he is adept at working in a variety of styles, with an approach that remains fluid and open-minded.

Each project is illustrated with gorgeous photography and accompanied by a narrative about the client, their brief, and Sutton's approach to the design. It is through empathy and listening that Sutton creates rich and meaningful interiors.

Patrick Sutton is a leader in the luxury interior design industry. His storytelling approach to design has earned him wide recognition, with numerous awards and commissions across the globe. Among these accolade, is a spot on the Andrew Martin Interior Design Review's World's Top 100 Designers list, being named one of Homes & Gardens' world's best 21 interior designers, and having the Sagamore Pendry awarded the #1 Hotel in the United States in the Conde Nast Traveler Readers Choice Awards. Patrick's work has been widely published in leading shelter magazines. Vicky Lowry is a writer, editor, and the former special projects editor at Architectural Digest, features director of Elle Decor, House Beautiful, and Veranda, and executive editor of Martha Stewart Living.
